Overall, it was a very positive and highly substantive meeting that emphasized the importance of further strengthening the Japan-India Global Strategic Partnership, which the two leaders emphasized is bound by common philosophy, religious views, interests and values, so that India and Japan can continue to be effective in seeking the growth of the two countries and maintaining peace and stability in the region.

Much of the discussion between Prime Minister Singh and Deputy Prime Minister Aso focused on cooperation to promote economic prosperity. Deputy Prime Minister Aso said, "I've returned to Delhi because we are natural-born partners and Japan is deeply committed to our strategic relations with India. Now, the number of Japanese companies expanding into India was about to reach 1,000. India is a land of promises for Japan and its industries. For the Japanese, it will be a tremendous honour if they could grow by working together with the Indians."

At the outset, Prime Minister Singh stated that he looked forward to visiting Japan and meeting with Prime Minister Shinzo Abe. Regarding the state visit of Their Majesties the Emperor and Empress of Japan, Prime Minister Singh stated that he most heartily looked forward to welcoming Their Majesties to India.

On the bilateral side, Prime Minister Singh stated that various dialogues and cooperative mechanisms between the two countries were functioning, and cooperation in a wide range of fields such as politics, security, and economic cooperation was deepening, based on the Japan-India Global Strategic Partnership. Noting that the Delhi Metro is a symbolic project for both countries, Deputy Prime Minister Aso stated that he looked forward to continuing to cooperate on the Dedicated Freight Corridor (DFC) and industrial corridors.

Deputy Prime Minister Aso requested further relaxation of regulations, including the relaxation of financial regulations, under the leadership of Prime Minister Singh in order to encourage further investment from Japan. Deputy Prime Minister Aso stated that this would lead to the enhanced advancement of cooperative projects in India.

Prime Minister Singh stated that he intends to continue to develop the economic relationship with Japan and that in doing so, expressed hope to further promote and diversify cooperation in the private sector and see economic relations of an even more complementary nature.

In terms of specific areas, both sides shared the view that cooperation would be continued in such fields as high-speed rail way system, rare earths, civil nuclear cooperation, and academic cooperation.

In addition, the two shared the view that security in the Indian Ocean was an important issue for both countries, and that cooperation would be continued in this regard.

Also, the two exchanged views on situations in East Asia and on other international issues, and upon Prime Minister Singh's inquiry, Deputy Prime Minister Aso explained about the economic policy of the Abe administration.

"WE ARE ALREADY ALLIES": DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER ASO SPEAKS AT FEDERATION OF INDIAN CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY CONFERENCE

On Saturday May 4, Deputy Prime Minister Aso attended an interactive meeting on 'Japan's revival and the Japan-India Global Strategic Partnership' organized by Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FICCI) at the Leela Palace in New Delhi.

Speaking with Indian people, the Deputy Prime Minister addressed the issues of industrial ties and strategic relations before taking questions:

Your navy is an ascending navy. It is feeling more and more responsible for the IOR, or the Indian Ocean Region and beyond into the Pacific. Our navy is what I feel proud of. And it is feeling more and more responsible for the IOR as well, because since 2001, some of our naval ships are always in operation, somewhere in the IOR. And the IOR's value needs no exaggeration. It is the area where 80% of world energy passes.

The biggest difference, perhaps, is that you speak English and we normally don't, and when we do, we do it poorly like me. But even that makes us good partners to one another. When working together, your verbal talent should serve us well. What does all that tell us? It tells us just one thing. We are natural-born partners, bound by common philosophy, religious views, interests and values. That's why I spoke of Arc of Freedom and Prosperity as Foreign Minister. In the arc, India stood out as among the highest summits.

There are two kinds of allies. Allies as in treaty allies, and allies in the sense we think the same way on so many things. India and Japan are not treaty allies. We will unlikely be. But we are already heart-to-heart, philosophy binding, value-driven allies.

India, ladies and gentlemen, should play a key role for our growth policies. India is a land of promises for Japan and its industries. I cannot forget what I saw as Foreign Minister, in your Delhi Metro project. I am of a view that an idea that to work hard is to live better can transcend national boundaries. The true significance of our joint projects, such as Delhi Mumbai Industrial Corridor, or our possible future collaboration on electric power technologies, including nuclear, is there. For the Japanese, it will be a tremendous honour if they could grow by working together with the Indians. That is at the core of Abe's message when he says openness should invite more growth. Ladies and gentlemen, we are very much delighted to be part of your industrialization.

Alliance, in the Indian context, drops some jaws, and I am aware of that. We will not call you our ally in the sense we call America. But almost, you are. And already, you are our heart-to-heart, philosophy bound, and common value driven ally. Both of us know that the international order functions only when based upon established rules and laws. What happens in the Western Pacific should affect your interests. What happens in the IOR should affect the interests of my country. For Japan, few other countries are like India. With India, of course we already have an EPA. But because we are close partners sharing the same values and perspectives, we now have Two plus Two meetings between our Secretaries from defense and foreign ministries. I was most delighted to see that for the first time we did a bilateral navy to navy exercise last year in Japan. We should do it more on a regular basis. To fight against piracy, to fight against natural disasters, and to be a stabilizing force across the wide confluence of the two seas, our joint maritime capacities should go only upwards.

To conclude, let me invite you again to see why we are doing what we are doing in Abenomics. It is because we believe a shrinking Japan could do harm to everyone, and only a growing Japan could do good to the nation, to the region and to the world. I should end by repeating what Prime Minister Abe said in his parliamentary address in Delhi. A strong India is in the best interest of Japan, and a strong Japan is in the best interest of India.

Pointing to the Chinese military expansion, Ambassador Yagi elucidated the Chinese military strategies and activities, with special reference to recent incidents in the East China Sea and the South China Sea.

Explaining the foreign policy of the government led by Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, Ambassador Yagi pointed out that, strengthening the Japan-US Alliance, deepening cooperative relations with neighbouring countries, and strengthening economic diplomacy have been identified as the three pillars. He explained the salient features of Prime Minister Abe's economic policy, popularly known as 'Abenomics', by discussing at length the three principal "arrows" or "prongs", namely, bold monetary policy, flexible fiscal policy and a growth strategy to encourage private-sector investment.

Ambassador Yagi endeavoured to familiarise the audience with the various aspects of Japan's security policy, and elaborated on the basic policy of Japan's national defense, including the National Defense Programme Guidelines (NDPG). He also spoke on various other pertinent issues such as the defense budget, the Japan-US security treaty, and the Revision of Guidelines for Overseas Transfer of Defense Equipment approved by the Cabinet on 17 December 2011.

The last segment of the speech focused on the Japan-India strategic and global partnership. Ambassador Yagi tracked the various aspects of this growing relationship, including economic relations and cooperation in the security and defence area. Speaking on economic relations, he mentioned that there has been a steady growth in the presence of Japanese companies in India with an annual average addition of 100 companies. India is the largest partner of Japanese ODA. He also quoted a survey on "Overseas Business Operations of Japanese Manufacturers", in which India has been rated as the country with the greatest potential for business expansion in the long term. Ambassador Yagi cited the importance of frequent high-level visits between the two countries, both at the Ministerial as well as Services level, which have cemented their cooperation in the security and defence area. He also mentioned the role of bilateral exercises, Subject Matter Exchange, and Staff talks and visits in strengthening the relationship.

Ambassador Yagi ended his speech by expressing hope for a more vibrant Japan-India relationship in the future.
